John and Beth Mathews are taking custom built home construction to the next level

Inspired by the craftsmanship of the past and experienced in today's innovative building methods and technology, Mathews Construction is committed to delivering quality custom built homes, additions and remodels for its clients.

The husband and wife team, John and Beth Mathews of Mathews Construction, offer a unique combination of a construction industry expert as well as a former commercial and real estate banker. Both are Auburn University graduates with John having completed over 200 homes throughout the Central Alabama region and the Lake Martin Area earning distinction for his craftsmanship and service, and Beth earning distinction in business by receiving recognition from The Wall Street Journal and being recognized as one of the youngest vice presidents during her banking years. After some persistence on John's part to get Beth to come work full time with Mathews Construction, Beth decided to "retire" from her banking career and delve into the family construction business.

John and Beth have been able to grow and differentiate Mathews Construction by offering a hands-on style that employs superior workmanship, effective project management, and client partnership. The company is proud to be an Approved Russell Lands Builder. You can see some of their most recent work in Willow Point where they constructed a beautiful new lake home on Willow Way East.

From site considerations and design team meetings to cost projections and construction, the company works step by step with its clients. Mathews Construction views every project with a unique perspective to achieve the vision of the client and the architect. John and Beth believe in promoting open communication between all parties and utilizing their industry knowledge to build the best home possible for their clients. Mathews Construction is passionate about building exquisite homes and focuses on exceeding client expectations in making the building process enjoyable.
